WORKSHOP 4

Connecting the Dots of Leadership

What some people perceive as leadership may not be everyone's idea or lived experience of leadership. This interactive workshop will give young future leaders the opportunity to explore areas of leadership interests through creative and practical yarning circles.

Allowing time to network with other likeminded women, sharing strategies on how we connect the dots of leadership and exploring what to do when the fear of making the wrong choice or decision creeps in.

Lisa Gascoigne

Lisa Warner

Coordinator, Aboriginal Women's Leadership Program
YWCA Adelaide

Lisa Warner is a descendant of the Anangu Yankunytjatjara/Pitjantjatjara people. Lisa is employed at the YWCA Inc. Adelaide as a program coordinator of the Aboriginal women's Leadership Program, working alongside Aboriginal women in communities providing inspiring leadership development workshops for Aboriginal women; workshops are tailored to suit the individual needs of the communities. Lisa is interested in program design and evaluation looking to design meaningful evaluations to evaluate program impact. She has placed a cultural lens on realist evaluation and logic models to guide her practice and has shared her way of working with co-workers as a way of strengthening their cultural evaluation capacity.

Shahleena Martin

Yalari Scholarship Student

Scotch College

Shahleena is from Darwin but her tribe Arrente is from Alice Springs. Shahleena has been boarding at Scotch College on a Yalari Scholarship and have been boarding since year 7 and is currently completing Year 11 in 2018. This year Shahleena has been involved in a lot of co curricula activities such as the Woman's AFL Aboriginal Academy with Port Adelaide and through this she has been able to gain a Cert III in Fitness. Shahleena's plan for Year 12, is to graduate and apply for universities like Flinders in Adelaide and Bond in Gold Coast, I want to study social work or if university isn't in the picture I want to work somewhere in the Port Adelaide Football Club or go back home and work.
